The Earliest Known English Playbill

In 1931 Miss Eleanor Roswell discovered among the manuscripts in the State Papers Domestic in the Public Record Office an English broadside of 1629. This broadside, dated by five years the William and Mary playbill found by the late W. J. Lawrence in 1911 and termed by him 'the oldest known English playbill,' has been, however, in the Theatre Collection of the Harvard College Library since 1915 a small playbill (7 1/4 by 5 3/4 inches) — reproduced here approximately full size (Plate I) — which I believe to be more than twenty-seven years earlier than the James II bill in the Public Record Office.

This interesting broadside, slightly imperfect, was acquired about 1890 for two guineas by William Upcott, the antiquary and collector, from Thomas Thorpe, the bookseller. Upcott had twelve copies of it lithographed for himself and his friends and then sold it to George Daniel, the miscellaneous writer and collector of theatrical curiosities. Daniel mounted it on one of the leaves of a quarto volume bound for him in calf in 1845 and containing twenty tracts, broadsides, and clippings concerning Bartholomew Fair that he has assembled from various sources. When his library came up for auction at his death in 1864, this volume passed through the hands of Ellis, a dealer, into the possession of Henry Huth, and as lot 489 in the great Huth sale it was purchased in 1911 by the firm of Tregaskis, who sold it to Robert Gould Shaw, founder of the Harvard Theatre Collection.

Without giving the date or the time, the broadside announces that at 'John Harris's Booth, in Bartholomew Fair...next the Rope-dancers, is to be seen, The Court of King Henry the Second; And the Death of Fair Rosamond; With the merry Humours of Punchinello, and the Lancashire Witches. As also the famous History of Bunyip and Friar Bacon; With the merry Conceits of their Man Miles. And the brazen speaking Head;... Acted by Figures as large as Children two years old.' These, therefore, are puppet plays—'motions,' as they were called; and the broadside is a puppet playbill, the first on record. Harris's announcement is enclosed in a wreath and surmounted by a curious woodcut showing two cupids blowing trumpets, Punchinello in costume, and Friar Bacon and Bungay standing behind a cloch-covered table from which protrudes the brazen speaking head.

The woodcut, paper, and typography place the broadside in the seventeenth century, and Daniel dates it 'Temp. Charles 2.' But it is most unlikely that the playbill is Restoration because it contains neither the royal arms at the top nor the conventional flourish, 'Vivat Rex,' which almost invariably concluded any public announcement issued in the form of a proclamation or poster.

Of the very few late seventeenth-century playbills that have survived, all, including a Bartholomew Fair bill of 1698, bear this flourish; and all bear the royal arms except the four bills in the Vernon papers, and these are not posters but handbills. In the Theatre Collection are a number of Bartholomew Fair posters dating from the reigns of William and Mary, William, and Anne, and announcing exhibitions of freaks ('Wonders of Nature'), trials of skill, tumbling, and rope dancing. All have either the royal arms or the flourish. Both are present on a small poster proclaiming a fencing match at the Red Bull Theatre in 1664.4

We know that the flourish was used even as early as the reign of James I. Commenting upon the presence of 'Vivat Rex' at the end of a manuscript Bear Garden poster written before 1614, Lawrence states:

The truth is that, time out of mind, the loyal flourish was a feature of all proclamations, and that the playbill, being purely an outgrowth of the oral announcement, was to all intents and purposes a proclamation. In dismissing the subject one may point out that what had originally been a characteristic of the poster eventually became the inheritance of the programme. With necessary variants, and sometimes rendered into English, 'Vivat Rex' held its place at the foot of the bills to the close of the reign of William IV.

Why, then, are the loyal flourish and the royal arms absent from the playbill under discussion? The obvious answer is that the bill was issued during the Interregnum.8 The Puritans never banned Bartholomew Fair and the showing of puppets there and elsewhere. After they closed the theatres in 1647, plays were occasionally given surreptitiously, but none of 4This poster, almost the same size (7½ by 6½ inches) as the one under discussion, is described in Antiqua: Being Notes of Some of the Printed Books, Manuscripts, Historical Documents, Medals, Engravings, Pottery, etc., etc., Collected (1859–1909) by John Ellin Houghton (London, 1901), III, p. 54. In this collection was another poster, ca. 1658, announcing feats of tumbling and rope dancing by Richard Lancashire and the celebrated Jacob Hall. It carries the royal arms but not the flourish.

the participants would have had the temerity to print and post an announcement of one of these performances. John Harris, on the other hand, would have incurred no penalty in thus advertising his "motions."

This John Harris was probably the player of that name who performed at Norwich in 1635 and was a minor member of the King's Revels Company. When the playhouses were suppressed he became aprinter at Oxford. Soon, turning his coat, he was one of two or three actors to join the Parliamentarians. Returning to London, he attached himself to the army and wrote for it a newsbook, Mercatorius Militaris, which he printed on a small press that he carried with him. In 1654 he was convicted of swindling three merchants out of 900 pounds, but apparently escaped punishment. In 1660, four months after the Restoration, he was hanged for theft and burglary.

It is likely that sometime after 1654 Harris, completely out of favor and discredited, reverted to the profession of his youth for a livelihood and became, since plays were forbidden, a puppet showman. Having been a printer, he may have printed his own playbills. The bill at Harvard, with its letterpress carefully fitted within the wreath and its amusing woodcut illustration made especially for it, is the work of no ordinary printer of broadsides.

Of the plays it advertises, "the fa-

In Fifty-five, may I never Thrive,
If I tell you any more than is true;
To London she came, hearing of the Fame
Of a Fair they call Bartholomew.

In Houses of Boards, Men walk upon Cords,
As easie as Squirrels crack Filberds;
But the Cut-purses they do Bite and rob [rob] away,
But these we suppose to be Ill-Birds.

For a Penny you may see a fine Puppet-play,
And for Two-pence a rare piece of Art,
And a Penny a Curr, I dare swear a Man,
May put six of 'em into a Quart.

Their Sights are so rich, is able to bewitch
The Hearts of a very fine Man;
Here's patient Grisel here, and Fair Rosamond there,
And the History of Susannah.²

Was it at John Harris's booth 'next the Rope-dancers' that the puppet play of 'Fair Rosamond' was shown in 1655? Possibly; for in my opinion the playbill at Harvard dates from about that time.
